

09/486334

ABSTRACT

C26
The present invention relates to a method for increasing the production of cysteine, methionine, glutathione and derivatives thereof by plant cells and plants, the method consisting in overexpressing a serine acetyltransferase (SAT) in plant cells and plants which contain such plant cells. The present invention also relates to plants containing cells which overexpress serine acetyltransferase.